

KIDNAP VICTIM ESCAPES IN MOKENA

Wab. Man Killed At New Lenox

Roy Booker, aged 52 years, of Decatur, a brakeman in the employ of the Wabash Railroad for many years, was instantly killed Tuesday morning in an accident at New Lenox.

The Wabash is making repairs on their bridge over the Lincoln Highway east of New Lenox. Sheet steel to be used in the bridge work was being unloaded on a wooden platform on which Booker was standing. The platform suddenly gave way and carried Booker along. One of the heavy sheets of steel fell on him killing him instantly.

Coroner Londus Brannan of Will County was summoned and the body was removed to a Joliet undertaking establishment.

Mr. Booker is survived by his widow and three children.

Work Begun on New Tinley Park M. E. Church

After a long period of waiting the Building program of the Tinley Park Methodist Church has crystallized and activity has begun. With this article there is a photograph of the early model of the new building. This model was made from the sketches submitted to official Board, who have sanctioned the forward progress. The slight changes in the final plans, are a result of the wise action of the official board who have requested that the denominational Bureau of architecture be consulting architects.

A Word about the Building.
This program is to proceed on the property now owned by the Tinley Park Methodist Church, in the village of Tinley Park. Such property consists of two lots, coming to the present church organization from each of the two merging churches, the combined area of which is 21,300 square feet, or an area equal to 8 1/2 lots of 25 X 100 feet.

The building is to be of an individual design so planned as to make use of every available space, and using the present village church as an integral part of the new church. This old structure will house the Primary department of the Sunday School, the heating plant, and the platform of the Main Sunday School room in the basement and the Epworth League room, Choir loft, organ chamber and chancel in the upstairs section.

The main new building will be used for the main Sunday school room, in the basement, and be adapted especially for such important occasions as the Ladies aid and similar organizations may demand on week days, with a sanctuary above this basement that because of the arrangement of pulpit, and choir loft, will be devoted entirely to seating of the congregation.

To the East of this main building, the entry way will be found, a ground level entrance with no outside stairs. From this entrance a short flight of stairs takes one up into the Narthex, from which is the entrance into the sanctuary proper and the contemplated stairway to the balcony under the Narthex, on the basement level one will find the kitchen and the Ladies and the mens wash rooms.

It becomes quite obvious that this plan incorporates the most efficient use and arrangement of building space that can be thought of. It is the hope that in the very near future a model, constructed along new and unique lines will be ready for exhibition so that this meager description will be very well supplemented.

HISTORY

The History of this present church The Tinley Park Methodist, is unique. One congregation goes back to the date of 1858 when a German Religious society was founded at the corner of what now is 171st and 84th Avenue. This building was rebuilt some years later (1885), and at the time of rebuilding the church installed a bell, high up in the tower, that can be seen in the accompanying picture. This church was active all its years until lightning ended its service in 1938. Rather than to rebuild in the country when there is a recognized urban trend the wise leaders of this church petitioned the

MOKENA CIVIC GROUP HEARS POLICE TALK

Sergeant Keeler of the State Highway Police Department attended the Mokena Civic Association meeting Monday night and gave a comprehensive outline of the work of his department, but stated it would be impossible for his department to police Wolf Road thru Mokena as his force of 20 men have 1,000 miles of concrete highway to patrol, some of which means 24 hours service. He further indicated he would have no jurisdiction within the incorporated limits of the village and that the best way to handle speeding problems would be for the village to have their own police officer. He also stated that in order to make a local police officer efficient he must be given the full backing and cooperation of the village board and the community and no favoritism can be shown or tolerated. If the officer arrests the town's most prominent citizen for a law violation the case should be handled just the same as though it involved a more humble person and no favoritism should be shown because of the standing of the individual in the community. Sergeant Keeler declared a local officer should always be attired in full uniform and he should demean himself at all times in such a manner as to compel respect for his office.

The Civic Association has appointed a committee to confer further with the Mokena Village Board relative to the policing problem.

Sergeant Keeler is located at Plainfield and stated that village has three police officers at the present time.

State Highway Police Officer Has Exciting Ride With Gunman

Homer Couple Married In Fred Kopelman Home

Before a group of 60 relatives and intimate friends, on Saturday evening, Sept. 23 at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kopelman, Miss Evelyn, their daughter became the bride of Angelo Depra, with Rev. C. E. Wolsted of the Congregational church officiating.

Preliminary to the wedding ceremony, Miss Emily Anderson lovely in a formal gown of blue taffeta, accompanied the bride's brother and sister Earl and Eleanor as they sang, "I Love You Truly", following with Mendelssohn's Wedding March, to the strains of which the bride and groom followed the pastor into the living room, where the marriage vows were solemnized before a bowler of garden flowers.

The bride was lovely in a gown of white satin, topped with a yoke of white pearls and carried a shower bouquet of mums and pink rosebuds.

Following the ceremony the guests were permitted to view the beautiful and useful gifts received by the young people before repairing to the Homer Church, where a five course dinner was served in the dining room, attractively decorated in festoons of pastel streamers centering over the wedding cake. Mrs. Guy Bump ably assisted the mother in the preparation of the dinner, which was served by 8 of the young people of the community: Miss Irene Storm, Mrs. Marie Ott, Miss Emily Anderson, Miss June Milton, Ray Carlson, Willard Cagwin, William Hansen and Earl Kopelman.

A very happy feature of the dinner hour was made possible when Elmer Rowley of Chicago Heights led the group in the singing of familiar songs, while plates were being removed between the courses.

The dinner was climaxed by the bride leading the way to the bridal cake, followed by her husband, who assisted in the cutting of same. The groom expressed his appreciation of good fellowship before the couple left the dining room.

Guests were present from Chicago, Chicago Heights, Joliet, Maple Road, Frankfort, Mokena, Lemont, Lockport, Highland Park and Homer.

Mr. and Mrs. Depra will be at home at 533 E. 11th street in Lockport to their many friends after October 1.

Mokena Home Coming Success

The Mokena Civic Association at their meeting Monday night received a complete report from the various committees on the outcome of the home coming and fall festival held Sept. 15 and 16 also the 17th. The total proceeds grossed $975. The expenses, however, were very heavy, leaving a net of $175. The reason for this was the building of a new sectional outdoor dance platform, purchase of wiring for the lighting system, an electric coffee cooker and many other big items running into money. Next year these expenses will be eliminated and the opportunities for a greater net profit will be more possible.

The primary idea back of the festival was to sell Mokena to the public and to provide a good time for all and this was fully realized as evidenced by the very large attendance which was far greater than that of last year.

Boost For Mokena Weather Man

Mr. August Hentsch, Mokena, Ill. Dear Sir:

About a month ago you were designated as the Official Weather Prognosticator for our Fall Festival, at that time you predicted Fair weather with no rain. You most certainly made a 100% hit. This Association therefore feels very grateful to you and is very thankful to you for your accomplishment. Wishing you continue success in your field, we are,

Yours very truly,

Mokena Civic Association.

The man identified himself as Owen McCarthy, 28 years old of Joliet, who is employed as a desk clerk at the Illinois highway police headquarters on route 66 North of Joliet.

According to his story he was driving on East Washington street on his way to the Woodruff Golf course when he noticed two men walking along the road side. As he slowed down his car one of the men armed with a gun boarded his auto and compelled him to stop.

The gunman forced McCarthy to get in the rear seat and compelled the man he had been walking with to take the drivers seat. The next move came when McCarthy's hands were bound. The kidnapper then ordered his erstwhile companion to drive. The driver drove on the 'Battle of Lines' Brings First Test Of German-French Defense Strategy

World Debates Question of Hour: Can Either Wall Be Conquered?

By ROBERT THIERS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
PARIS.—"Underground battleships" along the entire German-French frontier are getting their first test under fire these days as military experts await the answer to 1939's greatest wartime question: Are the West Wall and the Maginot line really impregnable?

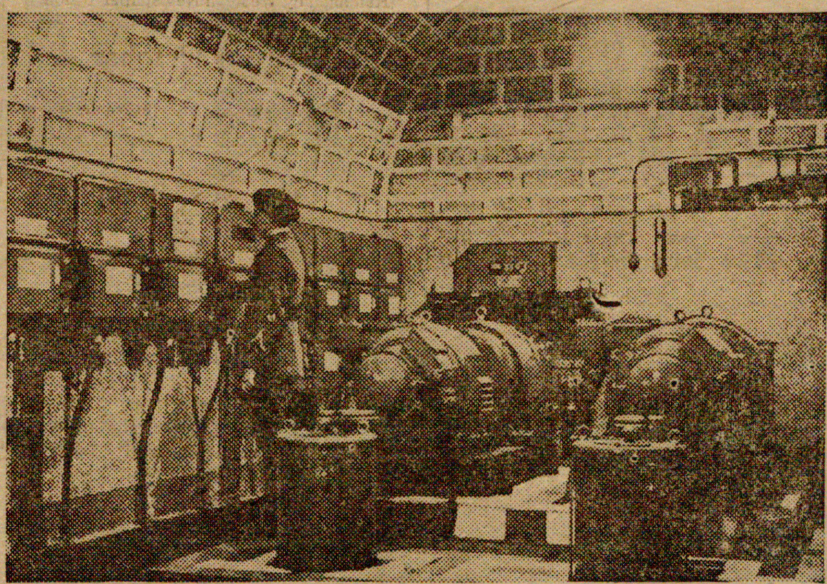

When France's early advance brought her armies flush against the great German wall, formerly called the Siegfried or Limes line, the invaders faced a truly stupendous offensive job. Newer than the Maginot line, Germany's fortifications are nevertheless a hopeless maze of underground fortresses, moats, barbed wire entanglements and tank-infantry traps equal to anything the cunning French ever devised.

The West Wall is not simply a wall; ahead of it for several miles are auxiliary fortifications, and behind it are slanting, knoblike tank barriers interspersed with concealed pits in which tanks may be trapped. The whole system ranges from 25 to 50 miles in depth, swarming with anti-aircraft emplacements to drive off enemy bombers.

Reich Rushes Construction.
No French officials know whether the West Wall has been completed. Last year, during the crisis preceding Munich, Adolf Hitler revealed 500,000 men were working on it, night and day. A few days after the current war began Nazi Labor Leader Robert Ley is said to have wired Field Marshal Hermann Goering, promising to rush the project to completion.

By contrast, France's Maginot line has been completed several years. It was from the French that Germany got the inspiration for the West Wall, which was not started until 1934. The Maginot line was conceived in 1925 while Andre Maginot was minister of war. Originally planned to cover only the frontier area between Belgium and the Rhine, it has since been expanded to protect the entire frontier from the Atlantic to Switzerland.

Both lines are really a series of forts, each with their own electric kitchen, washrooms, water reservoirs, electric generators and storage rooms. Miles of underground narrow-gauge railroads carry men and ammunition, the latter stored in giant reservoirs hundreds of feet underground.

Seek to Disprove Theory.

It is an axiom among military men that no army can build a fortress so impregnable that no other army can take it, yet each of these nations has built its first line of defense with the idea of disproving the theory. So well are the forts concealed, and so discouraging are the cunning obstacles placed in an invader's path, that the defenders would nominally be expected to enjoy a wholesale slaughter while their enemies were attempting to find a strategic point of attack.

Once the fortresses are reached (they are invisible from a few yards' distance) the enemy must reckon with a bombproof, shellproof opponent. Each part of the Maginot defense system, and probably of the West Wall as well, is arranged so that every other part can be covered, even to the tops of turrets upon which attacking infantrymen might leap to avoid the rifle and machinegun fire from the embrasures.

It took the French army only 10 days from the declaration of war to pierce advance fortifications leading up to the Siegfried line at Saarbruecken, which probably meant a good deal. Evidently the Maginot line was considered safe from flanking counter-attacks, whereas the West Wall was unfinished and therefore vulnerable. But the West Wall itself is no pushover. Many portions of it are protected first by a deep moat and barbed wire, while gun emplacements are concealed immediately behind.

If the Maginot line is truly safe from conquest, France may make appreciable gains through the German wall without fear that its own frontiers will be violated. But at what loss of life either line may be taken is anybody's guess.

Frenchman Had Honor Of First Loop-the-Loop

Adolphe Pegoud, a Frenchman, was the first aviator to loop the loop, on September 21, 1913. The plane used by Pegoud had an engine of small power and wings of large surfaces with a speed of only 45 miles an hour. Lincoln Beachey shortly afterward made a loop the loop at a speed of 75 miles an hour, carrying a greater weight, using a small-surfaced machine. He accomplished this feat on November 19, 1913, in a Curtiss machine at Los Angeles, Calif.

Two in the Morning

By OSCAR WOODS
(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

ED LIKED bridge; Barbara liked to read. But Barbara was a this year's model wife and she eagerly perfected herself in the game until Ed might be proud of her.

On odd Thursday nights, however, when Ed went to the meeting of the Exalted Elephants of Englewood (they had started their married life in Englewood a year before) Barbara smeared cold cream on her face and neck, had tea and toast and jam for dinner and settled down comfortably with the latest detective novel. By two in the morning when Ed returned across the city Barbara was usually sitting wide-eyed and anxious lest in some way she be a murder victim like the hero or heroine in the tale she had read.

"I called you up," Ed said one Thursday night, or rather Friday morning, "and you didn't answer the telephone. I thought maybe you'd forgotten your book and had gone to the movies with Stella."

"I just guess not," Barbara said decidedly. "I got only one night a week to read, and I'm not going to waste that chattering over the telephone with anybody."

"You mean to say you deliberately didn't answer the phone?"

"That's just exactly what I mean," she laughed, dimples dancing in and out of her firm cheeks. "Neither did I answer the door."

"Bah!" said Ed. "You sound like a Wednesday night book review. Give me people—real, live, talking folks—any time rather than a book written at so much a word!"

"I'll give you nothing," laughed Barbara merrily, "nothing except a request for a new fur coat or maybe a new car."

It got so that people would telephone on odd Thursdays just to see whether or not Babs would answer that telephone. It was useless, though. Within the apartment Babs, grinning at the telephone like the rascally little modern that she was, sat cold-creamy and blissful with the latest detective thriller in her hands.

Then came the Thursday night. Ed opened the front door with his key and stepped inside to find Babs sitting on the floor near the door.

"I guess," she said unsteadily; "I guess I've killed a man. They'll probably hang me, Eddie dear, unless you can get me that new fur coat and some spiffy clothes to impress the jury of my innocence. I—I—I've k-k-killed a man!"

And Babs was old-fashioned enough to faint at that moment right into Ed's arms. He saw the man stretched out on their one and only Persian hall runner—an ugly gash in his chin where Babs had evidently hit him with something or other. "You see," Babs explained while they were waiting for the police, "the telephone kept ringing and ringing, but I kept on reading my book and didn't answer it. When I got to the third murder, though, I got kind of a scary feeling and I reached over to the writing desk and picked up that heavy inkstand that Aunt Orinda gave us for a wedding gift. I thought if any one tried to murder me I'd throw that at him."

Here she stopped and shivered as the man on the floor stirred slightly. "Maybe—maybe he's not dead after all," she whispered. "Oh—if I k-killed a man—"

"Where did the ink-well hit him?" asked Ed practically.

"Well," Babs went on, "after the telephone had rung for a long time the doorbell rang and I didn't pay any attention at all. Then a key was put into the lock very gently and the first thing I knew the front door opened and this man poked his head in. I—I—I tried to yell, but no yell would come, and so I threw the ink-well as hard as I could and it hit him right on the side of his chin."

"Um," murmured Ed in some satisfaction. "He'll come out of it all right. He probably never knew what hit him."

Ed laughed and cuddled her close to him just as the police patrol clanged up to the lower doorway.

"It's Slinky Simms!" muttered the first officer. "Well, well, well, lady, you made a right nice haul, if you'll let me congratulate you, ma'am. Rang you up on the telephone, probably, before you got home—"

"Oh, I was right here," Babs said calmly now. "I had a good book, you see, and I didn't want to be bothered answering the door and the phone."

"Well!" gasped the officer. "Well! That's Slinky Simms' method. He rings 'em up on the phone and then rings the bell to make sure no one's home. Lots of folks leave a light burning to throw robbers off the track. Then if no one answers he robs the flat. There's a standing reward of a thousand dollars for him dead or alive, ma'am. A rich man not far from here was robbed—"

"A thousand dollars," said Barbara. "A thousand—dollars!"

The police had gone, taking Slinky with them. "I'm going downtown tomorrow to get a pile of detective books," announced Ed, "and I'm going to sit reading without answering the phone or door, ink-well in lap—"

"Bah!" giggled Babs. "You sound like a Wednesday night book review!"

Germany working the propaganda racket in news as they did in World war... The man who tells the story gets the breaks... High official figures in best human interest story of war... Secretary Wallace's plans upset by war... Experts figure on a long struggle.

WASHINGTON.—Those who wonder why so much more war news—and views—are coming out of Germany than out of Britain and France would be interested to study the newspaper files of the first world war, not only for the first few months, but for the first few years.

There has been much wonder, also, since Germany struck at Poland, why so little has been heard of Hitler. Since his celebrated announcement of the "line of succession" should he meet death, almost nothing has been heard of him. In fact, this tightening up on news of the Nazi chief has resulted in mysterious reports of his suicide.

The reason the Germans are pouring out news, while the British and French are keeping quiet, is that the Germans want to impress the world in general, and Italy, France, Britain, Hungary and Rumania in particular, with the notion that the Germans are invincible, that they have already obtained their objectives, and that what remains is merely a long deadlock on the western front, with punishing air raids and destruction of shipping. So why not have peace?

That is the German propaganda strategy now. In 1914 and 1915 the strategy was very similar. German victories, first in France and then against Russia, and prospects of a very long drawn out and bloody war with no victory for either side at the end. So why not peace and let Germany have what she had won?

Study of those old newspaper files will show some remarkable "scoops" by various press associations and newspapers. In nearly every case of such a "scoop," the source was German. There was propaganda in every line of them, no matter what the personal sympathies of the man who wrote the articles, nor the editorial leanings of the newspapers that printed them.

News Was German Propaganda In Early Days of World War

This was not only true of Europe. It was true of Washington and other neutral capitals in the period from August 1, 1914, to the entry of the United States into the war.

For example, the best news source for writers who had to do the neutrality and notes of protest stories from Washington in those days was not some official at the White House, or in the state department, nor in any of the Allied embassies, but none other than Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador.

The writer happened at the time to be in charge of the Washington bureau of a New York newspaper which was strongly pro-Ally, as indeed was this writer himself during that period.

Yet this writer produced columns of type, averaging, as a study afterward showed, something like four every week, which emanated solely and entirely from the German embassy—from the spoken words of the shrewd German diplomat.

It was Bernstorff who would tell us, one at a time and with the strongest insistence that his name must not be mentioned or hinted, what the next German note would say about the Lusitania. Even more surprising, he would tell us, shortly after that note had been received, what the reply that Wilson would dictate and Bryan would sign would be! And he was not guessing. He was in constant touch with the state department and White House. Officials would tell him; but they would not tell the reporters!

The man who tells the story gets the breaks!

High Official Figures in Best Story of the War

It's a dark secret who the gentleman is, but a very high official of the administration figured in the best human interest story of the war—if the details could just be told.

It so happens that a great many men and women of importance from the home state of this official were caught abroad at the outbreak of the war, and could not get steamship accommodations. Not a cot was to be had without waiting much longer than these men and women, with their imaginations working overtime as to what the German bombers were going to do to Britain, wanted to endure.

So frantic cables galore were sent from British and Scotch towns to this official. With his usual thoroughness, for this particular official won his spurs in the business world before the New Deal was heard of, he went to work. Soon he discovered that a very good, though little known ship, was about to sail, and that his friends in the British government would be very glad to put him under obligations to them. So without further to-do he booked all his friends. Any one studying the passenger list, with home addresses, would have been amazed at how many people happened to get on this ship who were from the state back in America from which the statesman involved hailed.

Which was fine, except that the ship was the Athenia!

Writer Boosts Garner and Gets His Employer in Bad

A certain well-known Washington columnist, whose articles appear in one of the Washington newspapers, took his customary vacation up at Nantucket island during the weeks that preceded the outbreak of the war in Europe. While he was on vacation he had various friends, ranging in importance from cabinet members down to friendly news writers, do his column for him, and these were duly printed in the Washington newspaper which normally carried his dispatches.

One of these articles was written by the Washington correspondent of a newspaper in Texas owned by Jesse H. Jones. It may be remembered that back in 1928, when the Democratic national convention was held in Jones' home town, Houston, there was a sizable demonstration for Jesse Jones for President.

But the article written by Mr. Jones' Washington reporter did not mention Jones, despite the fact that there has been a good deal of talk about his availability, in the event that the party should go conservative. No, Mr. Jones' able news writer made his column, pinch-hitting for his vacationing friend, an essay on the qualifications of John Nance Garner, who also hails from Texas.

The writer, Bascom Timmons by name, started off with the statement that Garner would make the best President this country ever had, and was the best qualified man in the country today for the office.

But you wouldn't believe the repercussions. Friends of Paul V. McNutt indignantly demanded of Jones what he was encouraging this sort of thing for, when McNutt, Mr. Jones' co-worker in the New Deal vineyard, was an avowed candidate in the event that Franklin D. Roosevelt himself should not run!

Outbreak of War Upsets Plans of Secretary Wallace

Virtually every plan of Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, has gone out the window as a result of the war in Europe. Demand for every conceivable food product, and incidentally even for cotton, has changed the whole picture. Even since the war broke out the AAA experts on wheat insisted that the expected demand did not justify an increase in wheat acreage for next season. But there will be.

Everybody who has ever had many dealings with farmers knows what will happen. With an advancing price and crisp demand, Mr. Farmer will plant more—even if he knew the whole world was doing the same thing. There might, he always reasons, be a famine somewhere else in the world. In fact, he may not reason that much. He just knows that buyers want his wheat and are willing to pay him a higher price than he has been getting, so he gets busy.

No farmer ever approved the crop curtailment program—for his own farm. Some of them think it is a good idea for the other fellow. They like to follow nature's own plan of providing a lot more of everything than could possibly be used.

But this time the farmers will be right, if the best military and naval experts this country has are right. For this war, the experts calculate, will stretch on and on. Five years, most of them are saying.

Agricultural Outlook Was Bad Before Disaster Broke

Before this disaster broke upon a dreaming world, the agricultural outlook was very dark indeed. Hence the various plans under incubation at the department of agriculture.

In its September business letter the National City bank said: "One aspect of the situation which has disturbed business observers is the low price of farm products, notably the grains, hogs and fats and oils. The outlook has been improved during August by the rally in wheat prices, and it is likely that the pessimism as to wheat was overdone, inasmuch as the government loan, on the basis of 80 cents at Chicago, was always certain to help the market as more wheat began to move into the loan stock. But the hog supply for the coming months is admittedly of depressing size and the supply of fats and oils is above normal, with lard and cottonseed oil both selling recently at the lowest prices in five years. Dairy and poultry products are lower than last year."

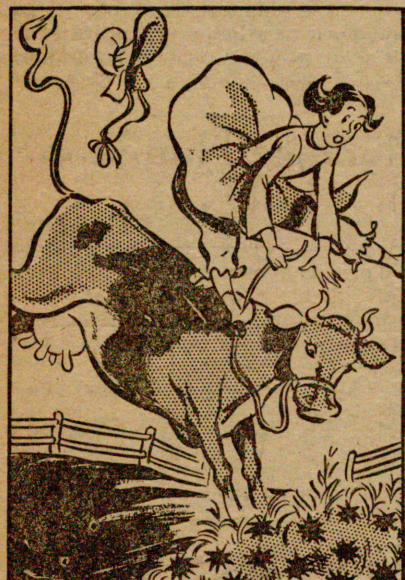

This was written, of course, before the outbreak of war. It was written when most people did not expect war. Yet the very return in wheat mentioned was probably due more to buying by people who did believe in the danger of war than any government loan factor.

Next year's crops, assuming good weather, will probably be prodigious. But, if war continues, they will be badly needed and prices will not be low. The real problem will come, as it came after the last war, when the war demand suddenly ends.

FRANCES WILLARD

WCTU Observes Birth Centennial of First Temperance Worker; 'Tomboy' From Wisconsin Once Led 'Praying Bands' in Campaign Against Saloons After Starting Career In Academic Seclusion of Female College.

1 She was born September 28, 1839, at Churchville, N. Y., and grew up a lively tomboy on a pioneer Wisconsin farm. Revolting early against men's restrictions on women's activities, she trained a pet calf to carry her when her father forbade horseback riding. Most of her early schooling was at home.

2 Later she entered North-Western Female college in Evanston, Ill. She taught in many seminaries and was the first woman college president to give degrees to women. She was the first dean of women at Northwestern university, and a nationally recognized educator when only 35 years of age.

3 She left this successful profession in 1874 to cast her lot with the infant but growing temperance movement, joining the historic women's crusade in which "praying bands" invaded saloons. The result was that in 50 days alcoholic beverage sale was prohibited by some 250 communities.

4 From 1879 to 1898 she was national W. C. T. U. president, and for seven years also headed the world group. Through the W. C. T. U. she taught women to organize to achieve social reform. In 1883 she organized units across the country, traveling over roads infested by Indians and highwaymen.

5 She was interested in all angles of social reform and of equality for women, and left not a stone unturned to promote every angle. Lecturing and organizing, she led formation of many of our great women's groups. All have joined this year in a centenary tribute to her, with observances throughout the land.

6 Before her death in 1898, she had been honored by many nations. Memorials to her dot every state. Her statue is the only one of a woman in Statuary hall at Washington, D. C. Ten thousand W. C. T. U. units are joining on her birthday in simultaneous national tribute to her memory—Frances Willard, pioneer educator and reformer.

Jeff looked at the little group on the porch. He spoke softly, "Ain't no use rushin' him; he'll shoot an' kill somebody. But if we was to kind of separate . . ."

"What do you mean, Jeff?"

"Go ev'y which way. Sneak up on him from both sides."

Clem Ross shook his head. "He's bound to kill somebody. A feller don't bluff when he's a-fixin' to git hung."

Babe Henkel broke in, "Scared?"

"No'm," whined Clem, "we ain't skeered ezactly, but—"

"But you are. You're eight men against one." She whirled on Jeff Butler, her black eyes snapping. "Did you come here to talk or to act? Are you letting three women frighten you away . . .?"

One of the swamp angels spoke. "He ought to be hung, ma'am, but it ain't safe goin' after him. If them wimmin wasn't there . . ."

"Well, they are. And if you don't get him now, you'll never get him."

The mob was not valiant. Mobs never are. They work in a frenzy of hysteria; they demand safety. Walking in on a loaded gun is not part of the plan. No man in that crowd had contemplated personal danger.

Upholding the honor and purity of Beauregard County was all right, but not worth serious injury. Jeff Butler knew the temper of these men. He knew that he had worked well, that he had fanned them into a homicidal fury. But Barney Hamilton's calmness, his readiness . . . were frightening them away. And Jeff realized that Babe had spoken truly. There could never be a second lynching-party. It was now or never. Mr. Butler took refuge in loud talk . . . fearful of the future. If they went home now, if the mob disintegrated—Barney would be free. There would be trouble. And always the danger that the Kirk Reynolds matter would continue to weigh on the mind of an inquisitive public.

Jeff said, "You better come down, Barney Hamilton."

No answer. The tableau held. Grim and futile.

Jeff experienced a sudden anger. He addressed his companions, "We come to git that feller an' we're a-goin' to git him. If them wimmin won't git off the po'ch . . . let 'em git hurt."

There was an angry murmur of endorsement. "They're askin' fo' it."

"Come on!" yelled Jeff. "Ev'y-body!"

He gestured valiantly toward the veranda. Three or four of the men stepped forward—tentatively. The butt of Barney's gun moved—ever so little—toward his shoulder. He said, calmly—"Just one more step . . ."

They backed away. "Ain't no use gittin' kilt," said someone.

"Skeered!" railed Jeff.

"Didn't see you rushin' forward none, Jeff Butler."

Mr. Butler broke into oratory. He recounted the evil which had been inflicted upon the county by Cathedral Gardens, by Barney Hamilton. He urged action, but failed to supply the leadership. Babe swung on Dan Creedon. "Why don't you go first?" she asked.

"Because I'm not a fool. That kid means business."

Jeff was frightened. He knew that the mob frenzy had passed its peak. He tried to rouse them again. His voice was shrill and harsh. They listened apathetically. Then they heard Barney speaking.

Barney said, "I don't know any of you except Jeff Butler. But I do know why he's here. He came to get me because I whipped him in a fight one day."

"That's a lie. I come after you because the law is lettin' you git away with murder . . . and them that take human life had ought to be strung up."

Barney again, talking to the others. "I didn't kill Kirk Reynolds . . . but it doesn't matter whether you believe me or not. You're lettin' yourself get tricked by this man, Butler. He's yellow all through . . ."

"Yaller!" Jeff raised bony arms high into the night. He shrieked with fury. "Yaller! Callin' me yaller . . . when you're the yallerest man there is." He faced his friends. "You ain't got nothin' to be skeered of. There ain't nobody mo' yaller than Barney Hamilton."

Somebody asked, "How you know, Jeff?"

"I got reason to know. He's bluffin', that's what. He's a coward. There wouldn't nobody but a coward hit a man who was wearin' glasses."

A voice queried, "What man?"

"Kirk Reynolds!" howled Jeff. "Barney Hamilton hit Kirk Reynolds befo' he stobbed him, an' Reynolds was wearin' glasses!"

The night was suddenly still. There was a tenseness—then a murmur. The mob fidgeted and moved definitely toward the veranda. Barney's gun snapped to his shoulder.

Then Babe stepped forward, Babe Henkel—eyes bright and angry. Her voice crackled. She said, "Wait a minute!"

They waited. Babe took three steps forward. She stood before Jeff Butler.

She said, "How did you know that Kirk Reynolds was wearing glasses that night?"

Jeff's head moved uncertainly on his long, thin neck. He said, "Why, ma'am . . . I know he was wearin' glasses . . ."

Babe's words were quiet. They carried accusation and conviction.

She said, "Yes, Kirk was wearing glasses. But listen—all of you: only three persons in the world knew that he was wearing them. One was Kirk. One was me. And the third person who knew was the man who killed him." Her finger went out toward the big swamp angel. "That was you," she accused—"It was you that killed him, Jeff Butler!"

Looking down from the veranda upon men with guns and a woman with blazing eyes, Kay Forrest found herself thinking, "Why, of course it was Jeff Butler who killed Kirk." There was no reason why she should think that, no reason why she should be thinking clearly at all, except perhaps that the past twenty minutes had been too dreadful for her really to be afraid.

A man with a rope and other men with guns, incongruous against a background of azalea. Men who had come to commit mob murder; men who had been deterred only by the presence of a grim young man and three women. Kay saw things happening down there on the lawn. She saw six swamp angels step back from the man who had incited them. She saw Babe Henkel move still closer to Jeff. She heard Babe's voice, bitter, positive—venomous.

"You killed Kirk Reynolds. You probably came to get Barney Hamilton—but it was Kirk that you murdered."

Jeff Butler's loose lips were working, his Adam's apple bobbing convulsively. He was holding tight to his gun and looking around in desperate search for an ally. He whined, "I didn't do no such of a thing."

"Then how did you know he was wearing glasses?"

"I didn't know . . . I—I just thought . . ."

Babe's eyes never left Jeff's face, but she spoke to the others. "He's lying. Kirk never wore glasses until that night. Nobody else saw him."

They knew it was true. Jeff's fight was a confession of guilt. He cringed. He blustered half-heartedly. Dan Creedon stepped forward and with a sudden, sharp gesture, wrenched the shot-gun from Jeff's hand. Jeff said, "Gimme that . . ."

But he made no effort to retrieve it.

Then Babe Henkel spoke again—to the would-be lynchers. She said, "You came to get the man who killed Kirk Reynolds. Well, you've got him."

The swamp angels shuffled their feet uneasily. They made no move toward Jeff . . . They had been roused to a peak of mob fury, and now they had been dropped from that peak. The lust for violence had vanished. They were bewildered and helpless. Almost apologetic. They whispered among themselves and moved imperceptibly away from Jeff Butler and the woman who accused him.

The climax had passed. Even Kay Forrest felt the lightning of tension. And with relief came the danger of hysteria. She glanced at Mrs. Hamilton and Margaret and saw that their faces were no longer taut; that the fright had gone from their eyes, but that their lips were none too steady.

Babe said, "Aren't you going to do anything?" The swamp angels did not answer, and their silence was all she needed. She swung on Dan Creedon. "Here's the man who killed Kirk . . ."

Dan's voice was quiet. "Better take it easy, Babe."

"Why?"

"Because they'll convict this guy for it. Doesn't that give you what you want?"

Barney stepped down from the veranda, still cradling his shot-gun. He moved warily toward the group surrounding Jeff Butler. He was very quiet about it: very sure of himself. He raised the muzzle of his shot-gun and pressed it against Jeff's ribs. He said, "Get inside the house."

Jeff protested . . . Dan Creedon snapped, "Get a move on!"

Jeff made a last despairing plea. "You'll ain't a-goin' to leave 'em do me thisaway . . ."

But the swamp angels were leaving, edging away into a night which was radiant with flowers and sprinkled with stars. They knew the truth—and they were afraid. Afraid of what might have been. Afraid because they might have lynched an innocent man . . . not morally afraid, but physically . . . because they could conceivably have been caught and punished. They were sick of the whole affair and virtuously eager to forget it and to be forgotten. They knew—not alone from Babe's words, but also from Jeff's manner—that their friend and neighbor had killed Kirk. At the moment they hated Jeff; not because he had killed somebody, but because he had attempted to betray them.

Then they were gone. The night swallowed them. Kay heard them moving through the swamp, back toward their homes. She saw Jeff shuffling toward the house propelled by the guns of Dan Creedon and Barney Hamilton.

The queer procession moved into the hall. Barney said, "Somebody call the Sheriff. Tell him to come get this man." Mrs. Hamilton went to the telephone . . . and Barney and Dan Creedon stood there, holding Jeff prisoner. Jeff was mumbling. Tears of self-pity trickled from his weak eyes.

Kay stood by the front door. Her eyes gazed into the night and saw the figure of a woman standing alone, a vivid woman bewildered by the sudden turn of events, a woman who had been keyed to high emotional pitch. Impulsively Kay went through the door and down to the lawn.

"Miss Henkel . . ."

Babe turned. Her eyes were misty, her figure had sagged. She looked utterly alone and incredibly tired. Her voice was flat. She said, "Go ahead. I haven't got a comeback."

Kay said gently, "I don't blame you."

There was a lump in Babe's throat. She spoke with difficulty. "I—I was pretty crazy about Kirk. I really thought Barney Hamilton killed him."

"I understand . . ."

"It seemed like I had a right to do this." She pressed one hand against her head. "What a louse you must think I am."

"But I don't. Really. And you should feel better. You've got the man who did do it . . ."

A sharp, mirthless laugh broke from Babe's lips. With a flash of intuition she said, "We're fools, us women. We go crazy about some guy, and . . ."

Kay touched her arm. "Let's don't talk about it. Come inside."

As they crossed the veranda Babe tried awkwardly to make amends. She said, "I'm glad it turned out like this—honest I am." She moistened dry lips. "Your boy friend certainly can't be bluffed."

Then they were inside. Mrs. Hamilton joined them and spoke gently to Babe Henkel. She was infinitely sorry for this woman who had lost everything that made life worth while for her. Mrs. Hamilton said, "The Sheriff is on the way out."

The half-hour which followed was difficult for its very lack of tenderness. The reaction was violent. It rendered them all inarticulate. Twice Jeff Butler tried to plead with them . . . then stopped because he saw that they were not listening to him.

Sheriff Floyd Griffin arrived with two deputies. He slapped handcuffs on Jeff Butler's bony wrists. He said, with forced heartiness, "It must of been a swell party. And this guy—he'll git plenty."

Dan Creedon rested Jeff's shot-gun against a chair. He asked, "Driving into town, Sheriff?"

"Yeh. Right away."

"Got room for Miss Henkel and me?"

"Sure."

Babe rose. Her dark eyes swept the room. She opened her lips to speak and closed them again. But at the door she turned. Then she said, simply, "I'm awful sorry . . ."

and she was gone. And Dan and the Sheriff and his deputies and Jeff Butler had gone, too. And with them went doubt and fear and suspicion and uncertainty. The three women and Barney turned and looked at one another.

And because Mrs. Hamilton and Margaret wanted to stay close to Barney—to touch him and to do little things for him because they knew that they had come perilously close to losing him—because they wanted to do and say so many things . . . they actually said nothing and did the one thing which they knew he most wanted. They left him alone with Kay.

The room was quiet. Barney's gun and the gun that had belonged to Jeff Butler were the only ugly reminders of something which already seemed unreal. Barney reached out and took Kay's cold hand.

"Let's go outside." He laughed awkwardly, attempting to hide his own emotion. "I'd like to see how things look without a firing-squad before me."

Kay went with him. She understood the reaction he was experiencing and realized that he was trying to get himself under control. For his sake, she fought against the instinct to break down and cry—as a little girl who has been badly frightened might cry. And for his sake, she tried to speak lightly once they were on the veranda together.

"Looks natural, doesn't it, Barney?"

"Yes . . ." He stared off into the shadows, and at the silver reflection of stars in the black waters of the lagoon. "I wish I felt natural."

She forced herself to be gay. She was gay. And if there was a faint touch of hysteria in that gaiety, it was not to be wondered at. She said, "You talked about your plans, Barney. It's too bad they have to be changed."

He tried to respond as she wished him to. "Changed? How?"

"For one thing—you mentioned going places, and then coming back for me some day when you got around to it." She faced him and her arms went about his neck and clung tightly. The lightness of her words was belied by the sob in her voice. "Oh, Barney!" she cried. "Try and leave this town without me, just try!"

He held her desperately close.

"You're a stubborn wench," he said gently, "so I won't even try."

THE INFANCY OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 2:13-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—And they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.—Matthew 1:23.

Looking forward to an experience in life which promises to be both interesting and profitable always brings a glow of expectation. Something of that spirit should pervade the Bible schools of our land as they begin a six-months study in the Gospel of Matthew.

Consideration of our Lord's life properly starts with the story of His birth, but we reserve that for our Christmas lesson. Today we stress the manner in which the Child Jesus was received into the world. Men then as now, were either for Him or against Him. God had only one attitude, that of loving protection and preparation of His Son for His ministry.

I. Christ in the World of Men.
The world of today is far different from that of the first century, but the difference is all on the outside. Almost breath taking have been the developments of modern civilization, but these have not changed the heart of man. He still fears and hates and fights and sins. His attitude toward Christ is unchanged. There are still only two classes of people in the world—those who have received Christ and are saved, and those who have rejected Him and are lost.

1. Against Christ.
How do men show their rejection of God's Son? Just as they did at His birth, by: a. Fear. Herod was afraid lest the coming of this one should result in the loss of his ill-gotten gains. His anger and fear made all Jerusalem afraid. b. Indifference. When the Wise Men asked where Christ was to be born, the priests and scribes knew exactly where to find the facts in the Holy Scriptures, but having done so, they relapsed into utter indifference. They had no interest in the fulfillment of the prophecy. c. Hatred. Herod poured out the violence of his heart by killing the first-born. He was the first of many who have hated against the Christ in futile anger. d. Sorrow. The tears of the mothers of Jerusalem but foreshadowed the weeping and wailing which characterizes Christ-rejection both in time and eternity.

2. For Christ.
Thanks be to God, there were those in that day who were for Christ and, like those who follow Him today, they showed: a. Spirituality. Men have marveled that the Magi knew of the birth of Christ. They must have studied the prophecies of the Word and been responsive to the teaching and moving of the Holy Spirit. Can we say as much for ourselves? b. Interest. Not content to know and to marvel, they shared the priests of Israel by their persistent interest in this great thing which had come to pass. c. Love. They brought themselves in worship and they brought rich gifts from their treasures. You can give without loving, but you cannot love without giving. d. Action. They came. They persisted until they found the Christ. Then they listened to God and protected His Son by not returning to Herod.

II. Christ in God's World.
Men had brought sin and ruin into the world. They had rejected His Son, but God still ruled and we see Him protecting, preparing, and fulfilling prophecy through His Son.

1. Protecting. Men may hate and seek to destroy God's Son. Satan may inspire them with ingenuity and cunning, but see how the Eternal One speaks to Joseph in dreams, how He prepares a place of refuge in Egypt and ultimately in Nazareth, where the boy Jesus may increase in wisdom and stature and favor with God and man.

2. Preparing. God knows of the days of public ministry which are ahead and above all, of that day when on Golgotha's hill Christ was, in His own body, to prepare salvation for you and for me. God is not taken by surprise. He moves forward to the completion of His plan with the stately tread of eternity.

3. Fulfilling. God also sees to it that prophecy is fulfilled. We read in verses 15 and 23, "that it might be fulfilled" and in verse 17, "then was fulfilled." God's Word is always sure, for He makes it so. His infinite and eternal faithfulness guarantees the fulfillment of every prophecy, yes, and of every promise of His Holy Word.

Progress of Mankind

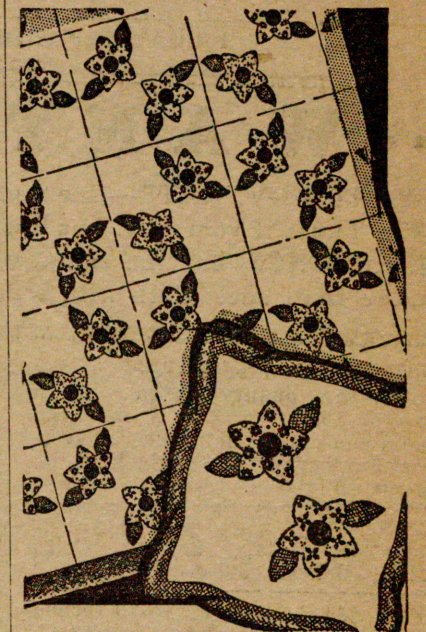

In my youth, looking at this man and that, I marvelled that humanity had made so little progress. Now, looking at man in the multitude, I marvel that they have advanced so far.—George Gissing.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

For Rust on Porch Lamp.—To remove rust on metal porch lamps rub them with fine sandpaper or steel wool and then apply a thin coat of lubricating oil.

Better Waffles.—The flavor of waffles is enhanced by the simple addition of the grated rind of two lemons to the batter.

For More Juice.—Heat a lemon thoroughly before squeezing and you will obtain nearly double the amount of juice.

Polishing Towels.—Towels intended for polishing glassware often shed tiny particles of fluff. To avoid this, they should be washed in the ordinary way and then rinsed in a very thin solution of starch.

Encouraging Diligence.—Make a list of duties for the young masculine member of the family to follow in cleaning his room. The business of checking them off each day gives him a sense of importance that encourages diligence.

Washing Knitted Suits.—Knitted suits should be handled carefully after they are washed. Wrap them in a Turkish towel for several minutes—to get rid of part of the moisture. Then lay them on a clean, dry cloth or towel until they are dry. Never wring or twist them—that is likely to break the fibers.

For Cooking in the Open.—Two fires often are more convenient than one. One may be used for the coffee and the other for roasting or frying.

Room I Guess Who?

A little girl in second grade has such an engaging personality that she never lets you forget she's around. She's small, with large, bright, brown eyes, two braids, and she is a bundle of vitality. She is always very much interested in what is going on and invariably has something interesting to add to any discussion. She comes into the room in the morning fairly bursting with something to tell, while her eyes grow even larger as she talks. Miss Snure is proud to have her with them.

News

The children are painting orange crates to make book-cases for favorite library books and magazines.

Room II Guess Who?

One of the boys in our room is considered lucky by all children, as he generally celebrates two birthdays during the same year. The reason is that he was born in Chicago, Illinois at 12:45 A. M. Daylight Saving Time, Wednesday which was 11:45 P. M. Standard Time, Tuesday. (Mokena used Standard Time that year.) Although he only weighed 4 1/2 lbs. at birth, he has grown to a tall boy, taller than average.

At present he lives in his great-grandmother's house; in fact, he has lived there for eleven years. He also sleeps in a bed which was his great-grandmother's.

This boy has a very kind disposition, is lovable and truthful. He is as well liked by the adults as by the boys and girls. He is a good student but at times likes to dream about caves, mountains, and boats. His ambition is to be an engineer; so some day we may ride over a big bridge built by him. Who can tell?

News

The pupils of the Intermediate Room enjoyed making flower silhouettes by splatter painting. These paintings make a very attractive border in the room.

As the fifth grade are studying different tribes of Indians in their Geography work, Gunter Thiel brought his set of Indian cut-outs to school. These were on display in the room for several days, the pupils wish to take this opportunity to thank Gunter for his kindness.

Room III

This person is very quiet and always pleasant. He is very mannerly and courteous. He never causes any disturbance in the room and is always busy and co-operative. He has brown eyes and hair. He is of average height for his age, and he likes athletics.

Room IV Guess Who?

The girl whom the high school room reporter has chosen as the hidden personality of the week, is rather dark complected. She is in her second year of high school and has always contributed much to the school. She has held several offices during her high school life. When she comes to school she comes to learn. She always contributes her share and almost more when it comes to class recitations. Her ambition is to be a business woman. May we (her friends), now thank her for all she has done to help our school.

Herbert Meyer returned from a two-day vacation to Rockford, Wednesday morning, Sept. 20.

Monday morning the entire school had individual pictures taken.

The high school room has decided on the sophomores taking care of the school news one week and the freshmen the next.

The music class held its first class Friday Sept. 22. Miss Pfeil tested the girls' voices to determine whether they sang soprano or alto. During this time the boys played baseball.

Friday afternoon the students listened to President Roosevelt's address to Congress.

Illinois Municipal League Renders Service to Smaller Communities

The ILLINOIS MUNICIPAL LEAGUE is a clearing house for information and city experiences in Illinois and, through joint action, a high quality service can be rendered which most members could not secure individually because of the great cost. The Legislature has just closed its sixty-first session, and the LEAGUE has sponsored bills and secured beneficial legislation, as well as defeated legislation harmful and detrimental to Illinois municipalities. The Illinois Municipal League is recognized as the responsible legislative spokesman for Illinois municipalities.

Municipal officials may obtain help and information on any problem concerning their municipality by writing or coming to the League office at any time. An extensive file of ordinances of municipalities is kept and model ordinances are issued from time to time by the League. Member Municipalities can thus obtain ordinances upon almost any subject in which they are interested.

A magazine is published each month, the ILLINOIS MUNICIPAL REVIEW, which contains articles on various phases of municipal government and administration, as well as results of legislation that is before or has been passed by state and national legislative bodies, model ordinances, and advertising by reliable firms handling municipal supplies and equipment.

The LEAGUE also maintains for municipalities a foreign fire insurance tax collection, recording and distribution service. This service is proving valuable to over 600 municipalities.

An Annual Convention is held each year, usually in September, and this serves as a short course in government and permits exchange of ideas and experiences between municipal officials.

The LEAGUE's twenty-sixth annual convention was held at Kankakee, September 12th, 13th and 14th at the Hotel Kankakee. The Convention this fall was put over in a big way, by the League and by the efforts and hospitality of Mayor Albert F. Hattenburg and the people of Kankakee. Kankakee sure did everything in their power to give everyone a good time.

I attended the second day of the convention, the General Session for all Sections was held in the Gold Room of Hotel Kankakee at 10:00 A. M. and the President of the League, Frank P. Meyer, Mayor of Danville, presided over the meeting.

He said, "Today we have a larger attendance than usual. He emphasized, that if your home is not organized, the village or city is not organized, there can be no order. That the Illinois Municipal League is the finest organization of its kind."

Honorable Albert F. Hattenburg, Mayor of Kankakee, a man that is liked by all, gave the welcoming address.

A. D. McLarty, League Secretary gave the annual report as follows: During the past year 21 new member municipalities enrolled in the League, making the total municipalities in good standing up to 686, representing 81% of the total population of the state. The Illinois Municipal Review which is published monthly, distributed 98,720 copies during the year. Perhaps the most successful legislative conference in the history of the League was held in Springfield March 8th. The outstanding legislative needs of Illinois municipalities were presented to the Legislators. One of the municipal legislation enacted into law by the 1939 General Assembly was the passage of the referendum amendments to the Minimum Wage Laws for Policemen and Firemen H B 1011 and 1012, which proved that, when municipal officials co-operate, they can get what they want. Among the most important of the detrimental bills defeated was House Bill 690, which would place municipal utilities under the control of the Illinois Commerce Commission. The League is also helping the cities and villages to collect their 2% Fire Department Tax. Received $5,000.00 more than last year. Mr. McLarty said, "To feel free at any time for any information that may be needed and let the League know if in anyway what improvement could be made."

Treasurers report was given, total receipts for year July 1, 1938 to July 1, 1939 was $20,461.85 and disbursements $13,572.41.

The address given by John E. McCoy, Attorney, Village of Lombard on "A home rule program for Illinois Municipalities," brought many good points as he is in favor of the Home Rule. He asked, "What is Home Rule?" It is the art of governing yourself, governing your villages. If the cities and villages do not have Home Rule, the State would have all rights, except what the Federal Government has. Those dwelling in cities and villages are interested and know their own affairs, and really does not pertain to the State as a whole, so we therefore should have home rule and don't let it get over into the State. If there was no Illinois Municipal League there would be no way of communicating from one village to another and wouldn't be able to know what laws were past or curtailed. Bring your group together and get into the legislature what you are entitled to. If you had Home Rule there would be no need of going to the Legislature as there would be one General Law, so long as it did not interfere with the State. His last remark was, "Let us keep Home Rule in Illinois, the United States and keep us out of the war."

Next speaker was Honorable Jacob

L. Crane, Assistant Administrator, U. S. Housing Authority, Washington, D. C. He stated, "That housing problem has been paralyzed for the past 10 years and our housing problem will be enlarged due to the war. There must be a population of 25,000 or more for a Housing Project, and the Board consists of five men appointed by the mayor. The purpose is for low rental for only genuine poor families. The rentals differ for under four rooms in New York $17.00, Buffalo $13.00, Florida $10.00, Austin Texas $6.60.

An address was given on "Municipal Uses of Photoelectric Products" by Leon Werner, Werner Product Inc., Chicago. He demonstrated what wonderful work a beam of light could do to prevent accidents and down costs of burglaries. The Beam of Light is like an invisible web and once the beam is intercepted, it will continue its duty until reset. It is used to operate light signals, chimes or signals for penitentiaries and buglar alarms. It is also able to turn on lights when the sun goes down and when sun rises the lights turn off.

In the afternoon there were Sectional meetings and I attended the one in Hall of Knights Columbus Building, for Municipal Clerks, Treasurers, Comptrollers and Commissioners of Finance. Hon. Elmer Strand, City Clerk, Rockford, presided at the meeting. The first speaker was O. W. Diehl, C. P. A., Accounting Division, Illinois Municipal League, whose subject was, "Budgets and Budget Procedure." He said, "This was an opportunity to get better acquainted with how to run a budget and how to spend it." There are two types of budgets, Revenue and Expense. Revenue means tax, license fee and amount from water and electric plants. Cash Receipts is the account from beginning of year. All funds must be properly separated. The treasurer is a custodian of municipal funds. City records should be kept in double entry by comptroller. Purchasing order is issued by comptroller or where there is none, by the clerk and retained on file and an accurate account kept. A complete chart account kept of all departments, broken up. The Appropriation Ordinance is a legal limit budget and guide to expenditures and do not go beyond it. Different charts were given out for examples.

The next speaker was Mr. Amos Watts, Member of Chapman and Cutler of Chicago, who spoke on "The Foreclosure of Delinquent and Special Assessments." He gave his point of view on the subject and said, "That cities or villages must appropriate and levy for foreclosure of assessments and taxes. It was a subject greatly discussed by those present, explaining what cities were doing and what they would like to do. Mr. Strand appointed four men to meet at the close of the meeting to draft a resolution on collections of delinquent taxes and assessments to be presented to the Illinois Municipal League.

A banquet was held in the evening at the Del Rio Ball Room, over 400 attending, breaking all records. Hon. Frank P. Meyer, president, who might be small of stature but bubbling over with jokes, presided at the banquet. Invocation given by Father T. E. Fitzpatrick, Vocal Solo by Mrs. Melda Hickox. Mr. Meyer introduced some State Officers, guests and Past Presidents. Remarks by Hon. "Al" Hattenburg, Mayor, Kankakee. Greetings by Earl D. Mallory, Director American Municipal Association. The speaker of the evening was Count Ernesto Russe, Milan Italy, who gave a wonderful talk on, "America as I find it." He said, "There is no place for a dictator in America, and the only place for a red flag is at a railroad crossing. Stop and think what you have done and are doing to your Constitution, take time to study it. There were 13,000 new laws introduced and 1,000 were passed. It is too confusing with so

Mr. McLarty, League Secretary, gave a few remarks and the program closed with a song, "God Bless America."

An invitation was extended to all members to attend a dance at Highland Golf Course in their honor.

A Week-end Drive Can Make You Wise concerning your next year's hybrid seed corn. We often learn through comparisons. Visit the Thomson Hybrid Seed Fields on Lincoln Highway, U. S. 30, one-half mile west of intersection of U. S. 45, and then visit the other hybrid seed fields of the same hybrid seed number in this region. Note the differences and use your own observation as against sales assertions. One thing that will strike you is that so-called certification does not make up for the differences.

Some may be distracted away from seed field inspection (where the farmer's seed is actually grown) to visit inbred seed plots many miles or more in the opposite direction but in which one-half of the inbred parent seed is grown (supposedly for next year's seed fields but not having a bearing on this year's) and then assume such a visit takes the place of farmer seed field inspection.

In animal husbandry affairs, from an offspring standpoint, we don't make up for the shortcomings of parent misfortune by taking a look at the grand-mother and particularly of the following year's progeny. (In this instance—1941 seed)

Visit the seed fields now from which you expect to procure your 1940 seed corn before husking (which is now about to commence) forever removes the opportunity.

PRESENT TINLEY PARK M. E. CHURCH TO BE REPLACED BY NEW EDIFICE

village church regarding a merger. August 1st 1938 this merger was consummated, and the present church organization began. The village church has a shorter period of existence. It was founded as the Tinley Park Union Church, in 1896. Easter, 1898, Two years after its founding Edward Tinley presented this church with the bell that has been adding so much to our community by way of ringing out the joy of salvation. A short time later the church, feeling the need of wider contact and association, re-organized, and became The Tinley Park Union Methodist Episcopal Church. For thirteen years this church stood in its original location on 68th Court, just North of the present parsonage. In 1909, in order that 173rd Place might be opened, the church was moved to its present location on 173rd place, at the rear of the present Parsonage lot.

A further word, of interest is that the present Pastor, Lawrence E. Weinreich who served the country church as a regular pastor in 1871. Little did he suspect then that his direct descendant would be serving this charge when such an important step is being taken. It is also interesting to find that this is one of the two charges out of all that he served that retained their identity.
There are a few other thoughts that cannot be drawn from property lines, nor from History as a merger represents a weld of two groups, and as a weld represents the loss of individual identity, in the completing of the new unit, so this building will stand for something that goes beyond small, individual groups. It will stand as a permanent memorial erected to the glory of God, by those who in following the son of God, have lost their own identity while working in God's kingdom, and carrying out and on the work that has been left to man to complete. This is an edifice erected, in our age, not for our sakes alone, but so that the generations who will follow after us might have our silent token of our trust in God and our willingness to serve His Kingdom and when completed, and the bell given by Mr. Edward Tinley hangs beside the bell from the country church that we hope to have recast, together, they will represent "Joy Bell," ringing out ever new, yet never changing message—The Joy of Salvation.

Farmers Watching Hybrid Yield

With interest in hybrid corn steadily mounting throughout the Corn Belt, farmers in the county are expected to pay particular attention during the harvest season to the yield performance of locally popular hybrid varieties in hopes of learning which will be best for them to plant in 1940.

Hilbert Siemsen of Tinley Park has gone one step farther and adopted scientific experiment station methods to prove to himself and other local corn growers just what the various highly publicized hybrid varieties will do on the Cook County farms.

Last spring he planted more than a dozen different varieties in a 5-acre proving field near here and now farmers have an opportunity to really see the difference in the varieties as they grow side by side under the same conditions of soil and weather.

He reports that local farmers are showing a great deal of interest in the test plot and several are going through the field every day. From the wide variety selection, they are able to find corn that meets all of their many needs, including many types of kernels and ears ranging from the smooth and shiny to the soft and rough and stalk heights from very tall down to almost sweet corn height.

Plans are under way to hold a public husking bee and visitors will be welcomed to see the varieties husked out and the final yields compared.

Trade among Friends

No matter what some folks say to the contrary, there certainly is a lot of sentiment in business. Friendship, for instance, makes more satisfactory sales than all the cleverness and argument in the world.

You like to trade at a certain store—not because its counters are arranged in a scientific way, but because the folks who serve you are always friendly and helpful.

Just that very thing—FRIENDLY SERVICE—is the power that draws people together into communities like this, where everybody can enjoy the many benefits of neighborly cooperation.

And FRIENDLY SERVICE is the sentimental reason why you find it very much to your advantage to trade with our advertisers—to buy where you feel at home, where your friends will see that you are well satisfied.

Powerful Song

Few songs have ever affected their listeners as much as "Amour sacre de la patrie" as it was sung during the presentation of the opera "La Muette de Portici" at the Theater Royal de la Monnaie in Brussels on the night of August 25, 1830. Inspired by it, the audience stopped the performance, broke the chairs, rushed into the street and started the famous revolution through which Belgium won its administrative freedom from Holland.—Collier's.

Guam, Tiny Island in Pacific, Is Important U. S. Possession

ON DIRECT ROUTE. Here is a map showing the location of Guam, tiny American insular possession in the Pacific. The island lies on the route of the trans-Pacific air clippers flying between North America and Asia. Before the coming of these ships Guam had no direct mail service but now a letter can reach the United States in four days. Heavy dotted line indicates route of air clippers.

Air Clippers Bring New Life to Forgotten Spot.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

Green, warm, and inviting, Guam lies in the path of the Pan American Clipper ships as once it lay on the direct route of the Spanish treasure galleons that plied between Manila and Acapulco. It is no longer an isolated and forgotten spot on the map, but an important link in a chain that encircles the globe. Before the coming of the air Clippers, Guam had no direct mail communication with the United States and by the time a letter arrived it was often more than a month old. Mail either came on irregular and infrequent naval transports requiring a full three weeks for the voyage, or else went by liner all the way to Manila, whence it was brought back to Guam on one of three transports visiting the island from the Asiatic side each month.

Today the trans-Pacific clippers, on a regular schedule of a plane a week in each direction, carry mail and passengers from Guam to Alameda, Calif., and vice versa, in four days.

There are just so many houses available for American occupancy in Guam, and it is necessary for the departing personnel to go aboard the same transport that brings replacements. The departing families leave their houses in operating order, with well-stocked refrigerators, and servants already installed. This makes moving day practically perfect.

Land of Sunshine.

Guam is a land of brilliant sunshine and deep shadows; happy children and forlorn, neglected dogs and cats; canned milk and cow-drawn vehicles. The natives pack the cinema houses to see western pictures, sing cowboy songs in praise of the great open spaces, and go home to sleep, ten or more in a room, with all the windows closed and locked to keep out evil spirits!

The Chamorro language, one of that great family of Malayan tongues, is the vernacular of the island. All instruction in the schools is carried on in English, by native teachers, but the moment school is out the youngsters begin to chatter in their preferred language, and forget all about English until school opens the following morning.

They call their language Finojaya, the "Idiom of the South," and refer to Spanish, which many understand and speak to some extent, as Fino-lago, or the "Idiom of the North," because the Spaniards first appeared here from the north.

While an increasingly large number of Chamorros now have a working knowledge of English, there remain many who speak only their native language. There are Spanish residents who speak only Spanish and Chamorro, Japanese who have acquired a knowledge of Chamorro, but little English. Thus amusing difficulties often arise, sometimes requiring a battery of interpreters.

In Agaña, the capital of Guam, where more than half of the island population lives, there are many native families of means, very often of wealth, according to the local scale. They are business men, government employees, and school-teachers. They read books and magazines, go to the movies, and in other ways keep more or less abreast of the times.

They are, for the most part, mestizos, with Spanish, German, Scottish, or American blood. The natives of this upper stratum of Guam society claim descent, on the Chamorro side, from the ancient chieftains. It is unlikely that there are any persons of unmixed Chamorro ancestry on the island, even in the back country, but of course the mixture of European blood is most noticeable in Agaña, which has always been the capital city.

Many Are Educated.

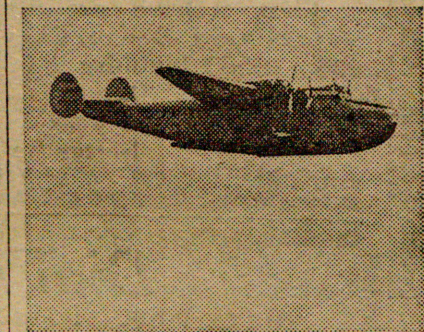

Many of the men and women of the upper class have had educational advantages that place them above their neighbors. Some have attended school in Manila, Hongkong, or the United States. The girls and women of this group are handsome, often beautiful, and are dressed in the latest fashion from Manila or San Francisco.

The most important official function of the year is the reception at Government House on New Year's day. Then daughters of the old families of Guam present a picture one does not forget.

There are very definite social divisions among the 20,670 native inhabitants of Guam. The town resident feels somewhat superior to the man from the back country, and villagers display a marked envy of dwellers in Agaña.

Many Chamorros in some of the remote settlements have never traveled beyond the limits of their own village. They appear to have very little curiosity about the island on which they live, and are sometimes incredulous when you speak of interesting places you have visited which may be within a short distance of their homes, but which they have never seen.

A journey of 10 or 12 miles is looked upon as a formidable undertaking. Formerly it meant an all-day journey in a bulcart, or perhaps on foot. Even now that there are automobiles, the trip from an outlying village to Agaña, a ride of perhaps 40 minutes, is still a serious matter, and it is not unusual for the traveler to seek a telephone at once to communicate to his family, through the village patrolman, that he has arrived safely in the city and is well.

Foot-Travel Best.

Within a short time after your arrival you find that you have just about exhausted the possibilities of the motor roads—some 85 miles of improved highways—and that if you are really going to see Guam you should have to see it on foot. The roads over which a motorcar can pass serve only the principal villages, and these are near the seashore. Only footpaths and carabao trails reach into the hills and the jungles, where no wheeled vehicle can travel.

You have no difficulty in finding guides to take you over the island, but you have to engage a different one for each district you want to visit. Each man knows only his own immediate surroundings. In many places the trails are not clearly defined; indeed, you often have to cut your way through the jungle with machetes. Since a mosquito-infested jungle would hardly be a comfortable place to get lost in, you invariably have a native as guide and carrier.

The Chamorros do not carry water on the inland trails. They drink from any stream or pond, even when it is obvious that carabaos or other animals have recently been there. Besides, in the jungle one can always get a drink that will at least prevent actual suffering from thirst by cutting a couple of feet of guai vine, which grows everywhere. Sap literally gushes from the vine so cut, and it is not unpalatable.

My Favorite Recipes

Lucky, indeed, is the homemaker who has among her treasured recipes Aunt Martha's "receipt" for soft molasses cookies, Mother's rule for old-fashioned apple pan dowdy, or grandmother's instructions for making home-baked beans. Those old, favorite recipes are the mainstay of many a tempting meal.

Each one of us has our own prized collection of just such recipes—some old, some new, but all of them tried and approved by a critical family.

The recipes I'm giving you today are some of my own favorites—family "heirlooms" and contributions from friends and neighbors who are excellent cooks.

When you're a "seasoned" or experienced cook you may take liberties with a recipe or with directions, but if you're a beginner, or if you're trying a new dish for the first time, it's better to stick to a proven recipe and the accurate measurements it calls for.

Accuracy in cooking means level teaspoons and tablespoons and cups in the amounts the recipe specifies; it means sifting flour once before measuring; combining ingredients by the method given, and cooking or baking according to time and temperature recommended.

Oven Fried Chicken.

(Serves 4)

1 2 to 3 pound chicken (cut for frying)
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
1/4 cup water
1 cup fine cracker crumbs
Fat for frying
1 onion (chopped fine)
1 cup cream

Dip pieces of chicken in flour to which salt and pepper has been added; then dip in beaten egg to which water has been added and finally roll in cracker crumbs. Brown in hot fat (1 inch in depth). Place in baking pan, sprinkle with onion, and top with cream. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees), until tender, approximately 1 1/2 hours.

Surprise Muffins.

(Makes 2 dozen small muffins)
1 egg (well beaten)
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter (melted)
2 cups cake flour
3 tablespoons sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons cherry preserves

Beat egg and add milk and melted butter. Mix and sift the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt.

Pour liquid ingredients into the dry ingredients. Pour into well-greased muffin tins and place 1/2 teaspoon of preserves on top of each muffin. The preserves should be partially covered with muffin batter. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for approximately 12 minutes.

Vanilla Ice Cream.

(Automatic Refrigerator Method)
2/3 cup sweetened condensed milk
1/2 cup water
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup whipping cream

Blend sweetened condensed milk, water, and vanilla thoroughly. Chill. Whip cream to custard-like consistency and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing pan. Place in freezing unit. After mixture is about half frozen remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of pan. Beat until smooth but not until melted. Smooth out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Serves 6.

A Chocolate Sauce for Ice Cream.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
2 tablespoons butter
2/3 cup boiling water
5 tablespoons white corn syrup
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon salt

Melt chocolate and butter and add hot water gradually. Bring to a boil, add corn syrup and sugar, and cook over low flame for 5 minutes. Cool slightly, add vanilla and salt.

Gingerbread Waffles.

(Serves 6)

1 cup molasses
1/2 cup butter
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup sour milk
1 egg (beaten)
2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons ginger
1/2 teaspoon salt

Heat molasses and butter to boiling point. Remove from fire and beat in the soda. Add sour milk, beaten egg, and the flour which has been sifted with the ginger and salt. Mix well. Bake in hot waffle iron. Serve with whipped cream and a dash of nutmeg.

Honey Spice Cake.

3/4 cup shortening
1/2 cup granulated sugar
3/4 cup strained honey
2 eggs
3 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon cloves
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup nut meats (broken)
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream shortening. Add sugar and beat thoroughly. Add honey. Separate eggs, beat yolks and add to mixture. Mix and sift all dry ingredients. Add 1/4 cup of dry ingredients to nuts and add to cake mixture. Add remaining dry ingredients alternately with buttermilk and vanilla, beating between each addition. Beat egg whites until stiff. Fold into mixture. Place in well-greased loaf pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45-50 minutes.

Clam Chowder.

1/2 cup carrot (chopped)
2 tablespoons onions (chopped)
1 1/4 cups potato (chopped)
3/4 cup celery (chopped fine)
1 pint clams
2 cups water and clam liquor
Salt and pepper to taste
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 tablespoons parsley
1/2 teaspoon paprika

Chop the vegetables in small pieces and place in large kettle. Chop the clams and add together with the clam liquor, water, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook about 1/2 hour, or until vegetables are tender. Scald milk. Make a smooth paste of the flour and water. Add half of this flour paste to the clam mixture and half to the scalded milk. Cook each, stirring constantly, until the mixtures thicken. Combine and add butter, parsley, and paprika. Serve very hot.

Whipped Cream Fluff.

(Serves 5)

1 cup rice (cooked)
1/2 cup shredded pineapple
1/2 cup canned red cherries
1 dozen marshmallows (cut in pieces)
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup whipping cream

Chill rice thoroughly. Then add fruit and marshmallows, and sprinkle lightly with sugar. Just before serving, fold in whipped cream. Serve in sherbet glasses.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

New life for an old rocker

THERE were rocking chairs hanging from the ceiling of a certain second-hand furniture store. "Nobody wants them any more," mourned the dealer. "I'd sell any one you see for 50 cents." The little bride with me promptly chose one. Perhaps she would paint it for the porch.

What she actually did is shown here in the sketch. The result was the small but comfortable, modern looking chair at the upper left. The bride raided mother's attic for two things that went into the making of this chair. One was an old quilt that she used to pad the back. The other was feathers from an old bolster which were used to stuff a seat cushion tightly so that it would raise the seat which had been lowered by removing the rockers. Cotton basted to muslin could have been used for the back padding and a cotton substitute for the cushion filling.

The new sewing book by Mrs. Spears contains 32 other useful homemaking ideas, with all directions clearly illustrated. You will be delighted with it. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Enclose coin, with name and address, to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill., and book will come to you by return mail.

'Tis the Head, Not Heart, That Wags the Tongue

In recognition of some service Chief Washakie of the Shoshone Indians had rendered, General Grant sent him a beautiful silver-mounted saddle. It was presented with troops drawn up and a grandiloquent speech by the commanding officer.

When Washakie was asked if he wished to reply, he shook his head negatively.

"What!" shouted the colonel, "after all you heard you have nothing to say?"

The Indian answered: "White man feels with his head; his head has tongue. Indian feels with his heart; heart no tongue."

CAMELS LONG-BURNING COSTLIER TOBACCOS

State Police Officer Has Exciting Ride With Gunman

Lincoln Highway to New Lenox. Here a stop was made to buy gasoline. The rope binding McCarthy's hands was untied so the gas station attendant wouldn't become suspicious.

The gunman guided his party from the Lincoln Highway onto the Mokena road. Arriving in Mokena the trio drove up to the Sippel General Store and the driver was ordered to purchase a clothesline which the gunman had intended to use to tie up McCarthy with. He paid 30 cents for the clothes line, the money being taken from the victim's pocket.

Returning to the car with the rope, the driver was ordered to get going, but he had trouble starting the car. McCarthy encouraged him to step on the accelerator, which flooded the carburetor. The man with the pistol, who was sitting in the back seat, became aroused over the driver's inability to start the car, and in the general confusion, McCarthy jumped out and ran down the street to Braun's ice cream parlor.

The car was finally started and was headed out of Mokena eastward. A short while later the driver walked into Mokena and also stopped in the Braun ice cream parlor where he met McCarthy who was waiting for the state highway police to arrive.

The man said his name was Lloyd Arnett, of Topeka, Kansas and that he was 35 years old. He declared he met the gunman the night before in Joliet and that they had shared a 35 cent room in a downtown Joliet hotel and that Tuesday morning the stranger had bought Arnett a cup of coffee. Then both started hiking out the New Lenox road. Arnett said he was hitch-hiking to Mansfield, Pa.

Arnett then described the manner in which McCarthy was forced into the rear seat at the point of a gun and how he was forced to drive the car. He said after he left Mokena he drove into a farm yard and the gunman ordered him out of the car and drove away. Arnett claimed he was innocent of wrong doing and had no connection with the kidnapping when questioned by the police. Upon the arrival of the state highway police in Mokena he was taken back to Joliet to the state police headquarters for questioning.

McCarthy said his car was a Nash which is insured. In the car was a set of golf clubs which the bandit took with him. McCarthy had $140 in his pockets but no attempt was made to rob him.

Up to time of going to press no trace of the stolen car or of the bandit has been reported. Just why the bandit forced the two men to accompany him is not known. During the ride McCarthy once said to the bandit, "If you want my car why don't you take it and leave me out?" but he was told to be still.

It is evident that the bandit was in a big hurry to get away. The bandit was described as being about 40 years old, 135 pounds, five feet five inches tall and bald headed.

Publishers Oppose Neutrality Bill Revisions

Many publishers think that to change or repeal the Neutrality Act is a step toward war and the building up of the New Deal Roosevelt administration.

The Illinois State Journal at Springfield, one of the largest daily newspapers in Illinois, has come out openly in its editorial columns against any change in the Neutrality Act. The Methodist Conference recently closed its sessions in Springfield, and at this Conference they openly passed resolutions opposing any change in the Neutrality Act.

Father Brockmeier of the Catholic Church in Springfield gave an address at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Friday evening, September 22nd, in which he strongly urged the people to send letters to their Congressmen and to the United States Senators requesting them to vote against any change in the present Neutrality Law. Judge Benjamin S. DeBoice, one of the most prominent and far-sighted judges in the State of Illinois, gave an address at the same meeting with Father Brockmeier, advising against any change.

OCTOBER 13 UNLUCKY FOR RAT FAMILY

A rat killing date for Cook County and adjoining counties has been set for October 13. The Cook County Farm Bureau is now appointing township directors and rat poison distribution stations in each township so that any farmers who care to may co-operate in a county wide rat killing campaign. The U. S. D. A. Biological Survey has conducted these rat killing campaigns for a good many years. They have found that red squill is the safest rat killing bait that can be used. Red squill has the advantage that when it is eaten by other animals other than rodents severe vomiting takes place and the poison is thrown off. However, rodents do not vomit and they are usually killed when they eat this bait.

The bait is being prepared and packaged by the Biological Survey and will be kept under refrigeration until the time for distribution arrives. Each of these packages contain two kinds of bait. One of meat and the other fish and both of them mixed with red squill. The package carries full instructions for putting out and it is suggested that this bait be put out the same night all over the county so as to make as good a killing as possible. One package will cover the average farm, house or store. If there are a good many rats two or more packages may be used. There are 100 small baits in the package. It is suggested that these baits, although they are harmless to other animals, be placed where other animals are not likely to get hold of it.

The question is sometimes asked if cats will be killed after eating a rat killed by red squill. The answer is that they will not. Sometimes cats are killed by tape worms that are carried by the rats. Red squill bait has not given so very good satisfaction with killing mice but it has some toxic effect on mice.

Usually rats that eat the red squill will die in a day—sometimes less and sometimes longer. As a rule rats that eat squill go to underground burrows before they die and do not produce odors. There is always a possibility however that they will die in accessible places and produce some odors.

In a subsequent issue we will publish the places where farmers may receive ordered bait in each township. It will be available at both Farm Bureau offices and all Farm Supply stores in Cook County. Farmers wishing to co-operate in the campaign may at any time write the Cook County Farm Bureau at Arlington Heights or Blue Island, depending upon the part of the county that they live in, giving their name, address, township, and number of packages desired. The bait will sell at 35c a package which is actual cost and must be paid for at the time it is secured.

Mokena P. M. On National Program

The three-day session will open Tuesday Oct. 10 in Constitution Hall, preceded on Monday evening by a reception to Postmaster General and Mrs. James A. Farley and the Assistant Postmaster Generals and their wives. The convention banquet will be staged Thursday evening Oct. 12 at the Mayflower Hotel. A highlight of the women's entertainment will be the White House reception at tea with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt on Thursday afternoon at which Postmaster Elizabeth K. Butler, Crystal Lake, will head the reception committee of the women postmasters of her State.

The National Association of Postmasters promoted the recently enacted postmasters' civil service law and the extension of the retirement benefit law to postmasters. It now aims to obtain legislation changing the method of compensating the cross-roads fourth class postmaster from a basis of cancellations to a fixed salary to eliminate suspicion of "padding" of cancellations.

In addition to the post office department officials, and Senators and Congressmen active in promoting post office service improvements, the convention will be addressed by foreign officials including Peter T. Coogan, deputy Postmaster General of Canada; George Herring, chief superintendent, land and airmail, of Canada; Jose A. Montalvo, director of Posts, Republic of Cuba; A. M. Menocal, manager Compania Nacional Cubana de Aviacion, Havana.

MOKENA POOL HALL ROBBED

The August Braun Goodie Shop and Pool Hall on Front Street in Mokena was burglarized again last Friday night. The screen was cut from a rear door to the pool hall and the inside door forced open. The loot taken consisted of six cartons of cigarettes, four coin wrappers of pennies amounting to about $4 and other small items.

The same place was burglarized in the same manner about three weeks ago. It is presumed the job has been the work of local talent. Last Friday night an attempt was also made to rob the Phillips 66 wholesale store in the east end of the village. Entrance was gained but nothing was taken.

The same place was robbed a few weeks ago and a fair sized haul of loot taken.
